

SOUTH ISLAND COMMUNITY COUNCIL

WHAT IS A COMMUNITY COUNCIL?

Community Living British Columbia (CLBC) is the Crown Corporation which provides funding to support adults with developmental disabilities in the province. To assist CLBC in reaching out to those in need, there are 13 volunteer Community Councils located across the province.

The South Island Community Council is made up of self-advocates, family members of people with developmental disabilities, service providers and members of our community. We volunteer our time to the Council for a period of 2 or 3 years. Our mission is to create, sustain and nurture the mutual sharing of information, action, decision-making and accountability between local CLBC management and community, towards the collective vision of "Good Lives In Welcoming Communities".

WHAT DO WE DO?

The Community Council acts as liaison between CLBC and our community. We help build welcoming communities by supporting and assisting families to become familiar with community living programs and services. We collaborate with other community partners to support community inclusion, citizenship, and participation by people with developmental disabilities. We work with CLBC to ensure their accountability to our community, and to inform CLBC about local trends and issues.

WHERE DO WE SERVE?

The South Island Community Council covers the southern portion of Vancouver Island, from Port Renfrew through to Victoria and the Gulf Islands, and northward as far as the Malahat.
